British consulate asks for expat top tips at Iceland

GETTING clear legal advice and learning some basic Spanish were the top tips from British shoppers in Iceland stores, when asked by the British Consulate what their advice would be for someone moving to Spain.

A team from the British Consulate and overseas healthcare team spoke to more than 100 people at three Iceland stores on the Costa Blanca.

As well as asking shoppers questions about their life in Spain, the team also gave advice on a range of issues, from access to healthcare to how to register as a resident.

British Consulate to share their knowledge and experience of life in Spain

Vice-Consul Liz Bell who attended the Torrevieja store said: "It was great to meet so many people and hear from them what helps make life a success in Spain. I was really encouraged to see that the top tips were around being properly registered as residents here in Spain, getting on the padron and making sure healthcare is sorted."
